General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Paper 1
Section A
AO2 Reading

- (i) read and understand texts with insight and engagement
(ii) develop and sustain interpretations of writers' ideas and perspectives
(iii) understand and make some evaluation of how writers use linguistic and structural devices to achieve their effects

4	Examiners should refer to the following bullet points and then to the table to reach an overall judgement. There are many features in the passage that are worthy of comment. Examiners must reward all valid points that show an engagement with the text and an appreciation of the writer's technique rather than have a set agenda of items they are looking for. Examiners must reward all valid points that address the question and show a clear grasp of the writer's technique. Candidates may refer to some of the following points: The descriptions of the desert <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• the desert sun is personified as being "merciless"</li> <li>• we know that the desert sun is very dangerous as the writer has to shelter from it</li> <li>• there is no artificial light and the writer runs off into the "black" desert night, unsure of where she is going</li> <li>• the desert is defined solely by its colour – red, symbolic of danger</li> <li>• the desert is a never-ending wilderness; the writer</li> </ul>	12

	emphasises the extent of this by the use of the word "eternity" <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• the only thing growing is a single tree, emphasising the desert's arid and bare landscape</li> <li>• the only thing growing, a thorn tree, offers no shelter and adds to the presentation of the desert as harsh and uncompromising</li> <li>• the desert does not shelter her as it reveals her whereabouts by showing her footprints</li> <li>• the father's need to return home as night falls suggests that it is not safe to be out in the desert after dark</li> <li>• the emptiness of the desert is evoked as the father is guided home by the night time sounds of his household</li> <li>• the darkness of the night is again emphasised as the writer was unable to see once the sun had set</li> <li>• the harshness of the desert is shown as the sun is strong enough to burn the writer early in the morning as she wakes up</li> <li>• the impact of the desert on the writer is summed up in the list: "hunger, thirst, fear, pain"</li> <li>• the desert is directly responsible for the writer's encounter with the lion, as it has been caused by the intensity of the midday sun and the writer's fatigue and thirst.</li> </ul> The writer's own thoughts and feelings <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• the writer's initial feelings are entirely physical, and are based on feelings of hunger and weakness</li> <li>• the writer feels that her life is at an end and accepts this, calling on God to accept her</li> <li>• despite the inherent tension of the situation, unusually, the writer is without fear</li> <li>• some may see the writer as accepting, even seeming to welcome, death as she invites the lion to attack her, "Come and get me. I'm ready for you."</li> <li>• some may see this as feisty and combative, almost seeming to goad the lion</li> <li>• her fearlessness is shown by the manner in which she meets the lion's stare, which creates tension in itself</li> <li>• the triple repetition of accepting her death indicates the intensity of her feelings</li> <li>• some may see her as careless in that she runs off into the night without provisions of any sort and she fails to recognise that she would leave footprints in the sand</li> <li>• the writer's complete sense of confusion is depicted through the rhetorical question, "Where on earth was I going?"</li> <li>• the writer depicts her fear at being caught by her</li> </ul>

	father as her heart was pounding <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>the writer's exhaustion is shown through the manner in which she steps out of time and her life reduces to the bare essentials of life – hunger and thirst, and her other overwhelming feelings are ones of fear and pain</li> <li>the writer's final thoughts show a simple child-like desire to go home to her mother.</li> </ul> Particular words, phrases and techniques <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>the passage begins with a deliberately arresting sentence</li> <li>the powerful and unusual verb choice, "riveted", depicts the manner in which her interest is held</li> <li>use of dashes and repetition, "- very wide -" for emphasis. The effect of the insertion is to physically widen the sentence itself</li> <li>powerful and emotive language used throughout the passage, "nightmare journey"</li> <li>rule of three used for emphasis with, "Hungry, thirsty and tired"</li> <li>short sentences used, sometimes deliberately ungrammatically, for emphasis, "And faster"</li> <li>rhetorical questions used for effect, "How many days?" "Where in the hell was I going?"</li> <li>structurally, the writer ends at a point of high excitement and takes us back in time, before eventually ending at the point the passage begins</li> <li>use of direct speech to give the encounter with the lion immediacy and to create the tension and pathos of her departure</li> <li>some deliberate use of alliteration, such as, "He licked his lips" to emphasise the manner in which the lion savours the situation</li> <li>use of simile, to describe how the sounds lead the father home, "as a lighthouse"</li> <li>complex sentences used to build tension, through the use of the semicolon and the emotive list: "hunger, thirst, fear, pain"</li> <li>use of ellipsis as a structural device in that the final one returns us to the starting point of the story</li> <li>the final sentence is highly emotive with its simple desire to return home</li> <li>the final word, capitalised, creates a strong sense of pathos and shows the writer is still a little girl at heart, yearning for the comfort of her mother.</li> </ul>

Range of writing: explore, imagine, entertain; argue, persuade, advise; inform, explain, describe

AO3 Writing

- (i) communicate clearly and appropriately, using and adapting forms for different readers and purposes
- (ii) organise ideas into sentences, paragraphs and whole texts using a variety of linguistic and structural features
- (iii) use a range of sentence structures effectively, with accurate punctuation and spelling

Question number	Indicative content	Mark
6	Examiners should use the grid below to award marks for this writing activity. The assessment of writing involves a judgement about a writer's ability to construct and convey meaning in written language, matching style to audience and purpose. Writing is marked against three skills areas that assess the Writing Assessment Objectives. Examiners should allocate about a third of the total marks for accuracy in spelling, punctuation and grammar. The 'best fit' approach            An answer may not always satisfy every one of the assessment criteria for a particular band in order to receive a mark within that band range, since for an individual criterion the answer may meet the descriptor for a higher or lower mark range. The best-fit approach should be used to determine the mark that corresponds most closely to the overall quality of the response.	10
